El Gaucho

Seattle's original El Gaucho was part speak-easy and part Hunt's breakfast club. That was 1953 and it was run by Jim Ward. By 1985 that era had come to end. Paul Mackay wasn't satisfied with that so he reopened El Gaucho in 1996 with a simple truth: Guest first mentality, genuine, passionate, hospitable, caring, supportive and engaged. Mackay wanted it to be more romantic, we've created what people dreamed the past was and amplified it for today's guest. Now with four El Gaucho locations throughout the Northwest, including El Gaucho Bellevue in the new City Center Plaza building.
